

Winning IDIQ Task Orders

Getting on an IDIQ or GWAC vehicle is a big win, but the real work starts when you compete for task orders.

What it is. An IDIQ or GWAC vehicle is like a hunting license. It doesn't guarantee work. It just gives you the right to bid on specific projects, called task orders, against other companies on that same vehicle. You're competing for real money, not just a spot on a list.

When to use it. Use this guide once your company has secured a prime contract on an IDIQ or GWAC vehicle, like GSA MAS, OASIS, or a specific agency IDIQ. You'll need it every time a new task order solicitation drops from that vehicle. These solicitations usually have quick turnaround times, sometimes just a few weeks.

How to use it.

- Open the "IDIQ / GWAC Task-Order Playbook" file in this folder.
- Review the agency's specific task order procedures. They can vary a lot.
- Identify key requirements and evaluation criteria for the task order.
- Develop a tailored proposal that addresses the specific task order needs, not just your general capabilities.

Watch out for. Don't assume winning the vehicle means agencies will just hand you work. You still have to actively pursue and win each task order against your competition.

Open it in your kit: <https://app.capturepilot.com/kit/idiq> Next step: <https://app.capturepilot.com/kit/teaming> (Teaming & Subcontracting)