

Contracting Officer Outreach

This guide helps you reach out to federal agency contacts effectively, building relationships before a solicitation drops.

What it is. This package gives you templates and scripts for contacting federal agency staff. It covers emails, LinkedIn messages, and in-person conversations. The goal is to introduce your firm and understand agency needs without sounding like a salesperson.

When to use it. Start this outreach early, usually six to twelve months before a contract re-compete or a new requirement is expected. You want to be known before the Request for Proposal (RFP) comes out. It's especially useful when you've identified a specific agency or program that fits your capabilities.

How to use it.

- First, open the "LinkedIn Profile Audit" to make sure your profile is ready.
- Next, use the "Federal Events Calendar FY2026" and "Industry Day Playbook" to find relevant events.
- Then, adapt the "Contracting Officer Email Templates" and "LinkedIn Outreach Scripts" using the "Editable Email & Letter Pack (Word)".
- Use the "COR / PM Conversation Scripts" for discussions with program managers and CORs, who often influence awards more than the CO.

Watch out for. Don't send generic, salesy messages. Contracting Officers get hundreds of those. Keep your outreach short, specific to their agency, and focused on how you can solve a problem, not just what you sell.
