

Capture Maturity Self-Audit Guide

This guide explains our internal scorecard, helping you see where your firm might be losing bids before you even submit them.

What it is. This is a self-assessment tool. It walks you through seven key areas that predict your success rate on federal contracts: customer relationships, competitive intelligence, technical fit, past performance, pricing discipline, your proposal process, and teaming. You'll score your own firm in each area. It's designed to highlight your weak spots.

When to use it. Run this audit early, before you decide to chase a specific opportunity, especially for anything over a million dollars. It's also smart to do it quarterly or annually to get a pulse on your overall capture health. Don't wait until you've already spent time and money on a losing bid.

How to use it.

- Open the "Capture Maturity Self-Audit" file in this folder.
- Read through each of the seven capability dimensions.
- Score your firm honestly for each section, based on the criteria provided.
- Identify the areas where your firm scored lowest. These are your biggest risks to winning.

Watch out for. Don't be overly optimistic when scoring yourself. The point is to find your weaknesses so you can fix them, not to feel good about where you are.
